INTRODUCTION.

In adverting to a curious archæological discovery which had at one time been made in the district, a county history remarks: "The object was placed in the —— Museum: which was equivalent to re-interring it."

Without presuming to make a comparison between that museum and the Library of the International Law Association, we may fairly say that the want of a Catalogue has hitherto prevented the books and pamphlets in the possession of the Association from being of that service to its members which might otherwise be the case. The present volume is an attempt to supply the deficiency made at the request of the Council: Dr. Baty being responsible for its accuracy.

Many interesting treatises have come to light in the course of the agreeable labour of compilation. To quote only one or two at random, mention may be made of a minute criticism by "D. C. L." of the judgment of Chief Justice Chase in the "Springbok," and of many valuable monographs by Sir Travers Twiss, and David Dudley Field. Another suggestive treatise is one by George Crawshay on The Old Law of Nations and the New International Law. The papers in the "Aborigine's Friend," as well as in the publications of the various Pacificist organisations, will be found to be of serious and not wholly ephemeral value.

There are a few old municipal law-books which would be unceremoniously disposed of by a practising lawyer. But they have considerable value for scientific and comparative purposes: a value which is increasing. It has therefore been decided to give them a place in the Catalogue.

A few Conference speeches have been included which had been carefully prepared by their authors and were in the nature of treatises rather than discussion.

To have indexed the contents of the excellent series of pamphlets issued by the World Peace Foundation and the Association for International Conciliation, and of the various periodicals in the library, would have been to go beyond the scope of our undertaking. But when magazines, etc., have been transmitted to us as containing articles by Members of the Association we have entered the contributions in question under the appropriate heads. The same has been done in the case of a few particularly important articles by acknowledged authorities appearing in the less well-known reviews.

Dates in square brackets are conjectural. In a few cases the place of publication is added to the date, as an additional means of identification.

The library possesses many duplicates, noted with an obelisk in the text, and the Association will be glad to dispose of them in most, if not all, instances.
